Rohde now steps into a deputy chief executive role with responsibility for culture, strategy and new business ventures. Daka will, in addition to leading the company, drive Zutari's growth initiatives, its focused client management programme and digital transformation journey.

Daka recently initiated some structural changes in the organisation, positioning the company for growth. "The changes we have made will enable us to be more fit for the future, support our growth strategy and allow us to leverage our footprint even further. We remain committed to working with our partners in delivering solutions to some of the world's challenging problems today," says Daka.
