

Cape Town Air Access announces new flights and expansions

Cape Town Air Access, based at Wesgro, has announced the launch of a new direct flight to Victoria Falls in Zimbabwe which will be operated Kenya Airways and will launch on 18 May 2017, providing weekly flights with the airline's Embraer E190. TAAG Angola Airlines' existing service to Luanda, Angola will also expand to a daily service on 30 October 2017.

paulbr75 via pixabay

The team is celebrating a significant expansion of connectivity to the rest of Africa because these flights come on the back of recent announcements by Airlink of an expansion of their service to Maun, Botswana from five to seven times per week, and their service to Windhoek, Namibia from two to three times per week.

Wesgro CEO Tim Harris said, “The increase in connectivity to the rest of Africa helps to strengthen trade, investment and tourism ties to key partners on the continent.”

“We have seen increased demand for Cape Town and had to increase our frequency in December. The route via Victoria Falls offers our guests two leisure holiday options,” added Kenya Airways MD and CEO Mbuvi Ngunze.

“The addition of this new route is excellent news for improving access for strategic markets to travel to our destination. In the Western Cape, we have prioritised tourism through our Project Khulisa growth strategy. It is our goal to add up to 120,000 additional jobs to the Cape's tourism sector, and we believe that Cape Town Air Access has a crucial role to play in helping us reach this goal,” concluded Western Cape Minister of Economic Opportunities Alan Winde.

Cape Town Air Access is a Wesgro-led collaboration between the Western Cape Government, the City of Cape Town, the Airports Company of South Africa and Cape Town Tourism to improve air connectivity in the Cape.

For more, visit: <https://www.bizcommunity.com>