

Mobile phones banned in schools

Kenyan Education Minister, Sam Ongeru has banned the use of mobile phones among students in schools.

Issuing a ministerial statement in Parliament on Tuesday, 23 July, over the ongoing students' unrest, the minister also attributed the unrest to fear of mock exams, weak institutional management, political influence, drug abuse and child abuse.

In this regard, the minister said no student who participated in the mayhem will be pardoned but instead will face the full force of the law.
