

Nokia shifts staff in Nairobi office

The reorganisation of the Nokia Kenya office, implemented as part of the mobile handset manufacturer's global strategy introduced in February 2011, has brought with it mixed fortunes for the firm's managers based in Nairobi.

By Michael Ouma 27 Feb 2012

Even though the Kenya office has been downgraded from regional headquarters to a local sales office, a move that put it under South Africa, some of the staff have moved up and assumed managerial positions as part of the exercise.

Two previous staff members - Michael Miano and Caroline Kihara - have each assumed senior positions in the new arrangement, with Miano becoming head of finance and control for South East Africa area while Kihara has been appointed head of logistics for South East Africa.

Read the full story on www.theeastafrican.co.ke.