Acquisitions to boost Dimension Data's digital skills and experience

Following the acquisition of iFACTORY in August, Dimension Data Middle East and Africa has announced that it has acquired the remaining 60% stake of Britehouse from a consortium made up of Remgro, Convergence Partners, and Britehouse management. The company has held a 40% equity in Britehouse since it was established in 2007. The purchase price for both transactions has not been disclosed.

Life-Of-Pix via pixabay

Britehouse provides digital solutions to African and global organisations, and iFACTORY is an Oracle solutions and services specialist consultancy.

Dimension Data already has a clear and compelling digital strategy, and an extensive digital infrastructure portfolio within its business units. Together with Dimension Data's existing application services businesses, Britehouse and iFACTORY further augments Dimension Data's enterprise capabilities in the Middle East and Africa region.

Brett Dawson, Dimension Data's Group CEO said, "Digital transformation is fast becoming a priority among enterprises across the globe. The acquisition of Britehouse boosts our skills and experience in the digital space and positions the group well to run our clients' mission-critical applications through either an on-premise, hosted, or cloud model."

For more, visit: https://www.bizcommunity.com