

Delicious International Food and Music Festival opens Early Bird Ticket

Delicious International Food and Music Festival has officially opened up Early Bird Ticket on the back of the President's State of the Nation Address (Sona).

Image supplied

After two years, they're one of the early movers - dipping their toes in the water and banking on a return to normal when the much-loved festival returns in September.

#SONA2022: "We're in a battle for the soul of our country"

Katja Hamilton 10 Feb 2022

"We're encouraged by the improving environment around the relaxation of Covid-19 restrictions and we're hoping that the country may be at a new normal stage that allows food festivals and live music events to take place, come September. It's been a long two years and we're looking forward to celebrating some incredible food and music once again," said Lloyd Cornwall, director of the Delicious International Food and Music Festival. "The long-awaited opening up of live entertainment comes at a much needed time for an industry that has really been hard hit."

The annual two-day sell-out festival has attracted some of the biggest names in the international, African and local food and music industries including; Jamiroquai, Chaka Khan, Erykah Badu, Hugh Masekela, Black Coffee, Louie Vega; chefs Reuben Riffel, Siba Mtongana and J Something amongst others.

Artists urged to apply to the National Arts Festival's Fringe programme

9 Feb 2022

Pre-registration tickets are now available at R550 per person - saving R200 from the normal price. Go here to purchase your tickets.

Follow Delicious International Food and Music Festival on Twitter, Facebook and Instagram to look out for a star-studded international and local line-up.

For more, visit: <https://www.bizcommunity.com>