The annual WIN Editorial Leadership Award recognises the exemplary contribution of an editor to her newsroom, and under her leadership, her media organisation’s contribution to society. 2022 Laureates were honoured at Wan-Ifra’s World News Media Congress taking place from 28-30 September in Zaragoza, Spain.

Equality and inclusion

In his congratulatory message, Wan-Ifra’s CEO Vincent Peyregne said: “Equality and inclusion in the media are essential for a healthy and representative society. We are happy to welcome our 2022 laureates, Zaba, Moukalled and Reyes to the group of media leaders who play an exceptional role in making a difference in media while contributing to these fundamental ideals.”

Zaba, who is the first woman editor of the Zimbabwe Independent, the country's leading business and investigative weekly, owned by Alpha Media Holdings (AMH), has more than 27 years of experience in the news industry. She was also the first woman to be appointed deputy editor in 2016, and the first of many other appointments after this point until being named top editor in Zimbabwe independent.

"This award is a message to young women in the media and those who have the beautiful dream of joining this amazing profession; they too can sit at the table. Through sheer hard work, perseverance and determination, glass ceilings can be shattered. My message to the young women journalists is to never give up. You are worthy and, yes, you can. I am deeply humbled and honoured to receive this prestigious global recognition," said Zaba.

Challenges women in media face

She is a Lebanese journalist and documentary producer and director with almost 30 years of experience in the media industry. "I am deeply touched by this award. It's an acknowledgment that goes beyond individuals to highlight the challenges journalists in general and women journalists in particular face. The current political, economic and security conditions in the Arab region may lead only to more discontent and frustration. The situation simply doesn't encourage optimism. It is, however, a road worth taking, with genuine commitment, patience, and enthusiasm," said Moukalled.

Reyes, a seasoned news executive with more than 30 years' experience as a journalist, is currently the senior vice president and head of Integrated News and Current Affairs Division of ABS-CBN Corporation, one of the Philippines' leading media and entertainment companies. A premier news personality in the Filipino-American community, Reyes established and expanded ABS-CBN's News operations in the US and Canada.

"This honour comes at a time when our news organisation continues to be severely challenged on many fronts. I am deeply moved and humbled to receive this recognition on behalf of my entire news team, most especially the women in our newsroom and in the field. They are at the forefront of our battle to defend media freedom in our country and preserve the values of our profession," said Reyes.
