“Digital transformation is easy and accessible, but many people think that it’s not because they are afraid of breaking the technology. The technology is built to last forever, and I am here to help you. Online safety in 2021 is of paramount importance and in order to be safe online, one needs to fully understand the technology. There is simply no excuse to avoid Digital Transformation in 2021. The time is now,” says Barnard.

Barnard, fresh from attending the TechSoup Global Network Summit – the leading non-profit network facilitating distribution of technology solutions to civil society organisations globally that convened more than 500 civil society leaders from 50 countries virtually for the biennial TechSoup Global Network (TSGN) Summit in June 2021 – has extensive digital marketing experience.

“If you are feeling overwhelmed with social media, I am here to guide you through the weekly steps you can take to make social media enjoyable and successful for your brand.”

“Digital marketing should form part of your overall communication strategy and objectives as a brand. Communicating with your online community should not be seen as a chore but rather as an opportunity to engage and connect with your audience. Digital marketing brings you as close as you need to be,” says Claire Kivedo, creative director at Overall Events & Communication.
