

Mark Banks to present new one-man show on ice

Comedian Mark Banks will present his new one-man stand-up show on the ice at the Montecasino Pieter Toerien Theatre in Johannesburg from 5 to 30 June 2019. The Russian All-Star Mints will also be making an appearance from time to time.

This year, Banks is turning 60 and would love you to come and celebrate his birthday with him in what is his favourite way to celebrate: You staring at him longingly and laughing as he talks non-stop for over an hour without anyone talking back to him. He has no idea how these random, outrageous, sometimes obscene thoughts come to him, they just do. Sometimes they come in the form of a dream and other times in the form of a Rottweiler with his grandmother's face. Both are equally terrifying but he will continue to pursue these thoughts in order to bring you the best in his particular brand of wildly-entertaining comedy.

In this completely new show, he will discuss all the things you've been thinking about – extreme Jo'burg security measures; Elon Musk's plans for world domination; running into people from your high school who haven't died yet; and coping with life in general. In Mark Banks on Ice, Banks will amaze you with jokes while jete-ing across the stage; he will wow you with his intellect while pirouetting on one toe; he will stun you with moves that don't even have a name in French. Will there be characters? Yes. Will there be plot twists? Definitely. Will there be ice? Hard to say.

Tickets are available from the Box Office at Montecasino and Computicket.
