Another year, another #AppleEvent and for the second installment of this year's event, Apple unveiled yet another variety of new products on Tuesday, 14 September 2021 - this time, they brought the colour back yet again in their new iPhone 13 range, as well as unveiling the new Apple Watch and two new iPad product models. While anticipation was high surrounding news on the iPhone 13, online users were in for quite a digital treat at this year's #AppleEvent.

Global media intelligence company, Meltwater, tracked and analysed social media mentions around the September 2021 #AppleEvent to uncover how the company still encourages users to "Think Different".

#AppleEvent global mentions

Social media buzz began on Tuesday, 7 September 2021, a week before the event, when Pop Crave shared, on Twitter, that the #AppleEvent would be taking place on 14 September, and that the iPhone 13 was expected to be unveiled. Anticipation began to rise following the news, with just over 14,000 global social media mentions on 'AppleEvent' on 8 September 2021, and the hashtag garnering a social media reach of 41.3 million people worldwide.

On Tuesday, 14 September 2021 (the actual day of the 'AppleEvent'), the hashtag received 296,000 social media mentions and had a social media reach of 2.61 billion people worldwide, indicating the global high interest in what Apple were launching among online users.

These numbers more than doubled the following day, where the data collected 638,000 social media mentions on the hashtag on 15 September 2021, garnering a global social reach of 2.74 trillion.

With the event being livestreamed from the United States of America (USA), the top five countries with social media users engaging the most on the hashtag were the USA, Japan, Thailand, India and Malaysia, respectively.

The data indicates that interest from Japan and Thailand for the 'AppleEvent' was centred around users sharing their thoughts on Apple producing an iPhone with a 1TB storage capacity as well as the cost of the iPhone 13 range. The data also shows that interest from India centred around how the iPhone 13's design didn't look any different to the iPhone 12 and were not too impressed with the small changes that had been made to the new lineup of iPhones. In Malaysia, social media users were quite fond of the new colours that the iPhone 13 came in, with 'Sierra Blue' emerging as a stand-out colour.

Eighty-three percent of global social media users had these mixed feelings towards the new iPhone 13, with many users questioning whether to buy the phone or not due to the similarities when compared to the design of previous iPhone models, particularly the iPhone 12.

The 11% positive sentiment that the data found praised Apple for the new colours that the iPhone 13 came in, with 'Sierra Blue' emerging as a fan favourite, as well as the Pro range of iPhones emerging as fan favourites for what users might purchase. The 6% negative sentiment is attributed to social media users expressing their disappointment in the design of the iPhone 13 and Apple's lack of innovation in this regard.
