

The Fulfilment Summit set to go live this week

The Fulfilment Summit is a one day virtual event set to run on 26 May 2021. The event is part of the Ecom Africa series which has taken place in Cape Town for the last six years. The Ecom Africa series has attracted some of the biggest brands in e-commerce, retail, CX, fulfilment, payments and fintech.

As a digital offshoot of Ecom Africa, The Fulfilment Summit explores leading fulfilment strategies across paths to purchase, pick, pack and delivery operations. The virtual summit will unpack the problems and added pressures that an accelerated digital economy has posed on businesses and their customers while exploring three avenues of particular contention.

The event has come together in light of a significantly altered landscape of the fulfilment industry globally due to the impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic. Online retailers and e-commerce stores had to significantly pivot their operations to cater for the restrictions of lockdown, social distancing, and a more active digital customer.

By June 2020, global retail website visits were up to 22bn a month from 16bn visits in January 2020. E-commerce companies compared online sales to that of Black Friday every day for several months. Experts claim that Covid-19 has marked a significant shift in global online sales, with customers more and more likely to choose online purchasing than instore.

Covid-19 forced a rapid acceleration in business transformation within e-tailers and online brands to keep up with a significant change in customer behavior. These key learnings will be shared by the speaker panel. They will unpack the challenges that were faced, obstacles that were overcome and how operations were transformed to keep up with the new socially-distanced world.
